Artcam 2012 Crack > Download > Artcam 2012 Full Crack Free Download >Improved detection of coronary atherosclerotic disease by using new ultrafast MR imaging. To determine the clinical impact of using new ultrafast MR imaging in detecting coronary atherosclerosis. Twenty-nine patients with and 15 patients without coronary artery disease (CAD) were studied. All patients underwent ultrafast MR imaging with a time-resolved MR angiography protocol. The contrast resolution of the vessel wall was achieved with a spoiled gradient-recalled-echo sequence, and the blood-pool signal was suppressed by a breath-hold-based, multi-echo-level-segmented 3D inversion-recovery spoiled gradient-recalled-echo sequence.

Images were analyzed for signal characteristics (wall/lumen and vessel/lumen contrast) and vessel wall thickness in 8 equidistant cross sections in the left and right coronary artery. In addition, a qualitative analysis of contrast-to-noise ratio (CNR), signal intensity, and image quality was performed by 3 independent observers.

Conventional MR imaging showed CAD in 15 of 29 patients, all of whom had more than 1 positive vessel; ultrafast MR imaging showed CAD in 8 of 29 patients, of whom 2 had only 1 positive vessel.

A qualitative analysis of CNR revealed that ultrafast MR imaging produced the best signal intensity in wall/lumen contrast as well as vessel/lumen contrast. Moreover, ultrafast MR imaging depicted vessels with a significantly higher wall thickness in both coronary arteries than conventional MR imaging, which improved the detection of CAD. Intraobserver reliability for the detection of CAD by all observers was excellent ($\kappa = 0.90-1.00$). Interobserver agreement was substantial for ultrafast MR imaging ($\kappa = 0.65-0.90$) and only fair for conventional MR imaging ($\kappa = 0.35-0.60$). Ultrafast MR imaging with a spoiled gradient-recalled-echo sequence provides higher-contrast resolution of coronary artery walls and better detection of CAD than conventional MR imaging. The invention relates to a method of and an apparatus for treating exhaust gases from an internal combustion engine, such as an automotive engine, to burn off harmful unburnt hydrocarbon (HC) components. As known, exhaust gases contain various pollutants, such as carbon monoxide (CO), oxides of nitrogen (NO_x) and unburnt HC (spontaneous or catalytic oxidation
